Kahane was right! They must go!

A State That Wishes to Survive Must Neutralize the Influence of the Muslim Brotherhood Within Its Borders — Both on Its Streets and at the Ballot Box

By Yekutiel Guzofsky

Slowly, and far too late, France and most countries in Europe and America are learning the hard way that the Creator of the Universe was right when He described the Ishmaelites as:

"A wild man; his hand will be against everyone, and everyone's hand against him." (Genesis 16:12)

(Nachmanides, Ibn Ezra, and others, in their commentaries on this verse, explain that they will defeat and dominate all those around them.)

And God was right when He commanded our compassionate forefather Abraham to listen to his wife Sarah and expel the Egyptian maidservant Hagar and her son Ishmael (Genesis 21:10).

For there is no possibility of coexistence between Ishmael and Isaac, or between our Muslim brethren and others.

What will the justices of Israel's Supreme Court and the State Attorney's Office do? Will they put the Holy One, Blessed Be He, in the defendant's dock on charges of incitement to racism? Or will they burn and confiscate the Torah, or portions of the Book of Genesis?

As Rabbi Kahane would say:

"Look at how they kill one another, and you will understand what they will do to us if they ever have the power."

The truth is that they kill one another even among themselves. And if that is what happens within their own tribe, it is clear that they will not succeed in living harmoniously alongside Christians and Hindus. All the more so — a thousand times over — they will never agree to live peacefully with the Jewish "infidels."

What Is to Be Done?

Rabbi Kahane was right when he warned that they were a ticking time bomb and that they would endanger the very existence of the Jewish state as a Jewish state — not only through bombs, but even more through babies and ballot papers.

Already in the 1970s, he predicted what everyone is beginning to understand today, albeit several decades too late:

They do not need to become a majority in order to destroy Israel. It is enough for them to win twenty seats in the Knesset and join forces with a minority of Israel-haters and a minority of confused Jewish brethren — and, God forbid, our two-thousand-year-old dream of returning to Zion will be lost.

If the State Attorney's Office persecutes me for writing this correct assessment and warning, my name is Yekutiel, son of Yaakov, and I will be proud to stand trial for speaking the painful truth and proposing the only solution that might still somehow save the country that remains beloved by the majority of the Jewish people living in Zion.

As stated, I am not the only person who thinks this way, nor am I the first to dare to speak the truth.

Most Jews in the Land of Israel are still sane and think exactly as I do.

Even Bibi Netanyahu, when he saw the images from Rahat and Kafr Qasim, was alarmed and cried out that "the Arabs are rushing to the polls."

So if I am prosecuted for issuing this warning after they have already voted, then an additional indictment should also be filed against Bibi for his warnings in real time.

There is a long list of leaders, from both the political Right and Left, in Israel and throughout the world, who supported or continue to support what they regarded as the only solution to prevent Islam from taking over the countries and societies in which Muslims live.

These leaders advocated population transfers, some even by force and coercion.

Here is a very partial list:

Golda Meir: An investigation by Israel's Kan public broadcaster revealed that in 1969 Golda Meir decided to transfer 60,000 Gaza residents to Paraguay.

Geula Even-Saar: In an article published in Maariv on February 7, 2025, she wrote:

"What Ben-Gurion failed to achieve, Trump will accomplish: The Gaza emigration plan brings history full circle. No matter how angry Arab countries are over Trump's successful plan to relocate Gazans, the question is whether they can afford to refuse the leader of the world's most powerful superpower..."

Berl Katznelson: Opposed the idea of partitioning the Land of Israel and supported, in principle, the transfer of Arabs to neighboring countries.

David Ben-Gurion: In 1937, following the Peel Commission's recommendations for partition, he expressed interest in and even supported the possibility of population transfer as a tactical or practical solution.

The idea of population transfer was once accepted by the Zionist Left.

It is interesting to consider how Ben-Gurion's words would be received today:

"The state is only a stage in the realization of Zionism... preparing the ground for our expansion throughout the entire land."

Not All Arabs — But Those Hostile to Israel Must Leave!

I am not saying that every Arab, simply by virtue of being Arab, is an enemy of Israel.

Clearly, there is a minority of Arabs who are not hostile to Israel.

On the other hand, it is equally clear that the majority, to put it mildly, are not proud to sing the national anthem of the State of Israel and do not feel connected to the Zionist dream or to the yearning of the Jewish soul.

They do not celebrate Independence Day — which they call "Nakba Day" in the Ishmaelite calendar — because peoples who have been conquered generally do not celebrate their own defeat.

What Do We Do?

I do not know how the negotiations to form a government will end, whether we will be dragged into another election campaign, or, even if a government is formed, how long it will survive.

It is clear that if the government depends on Arab parties, its ability to defend itself will be severely restricted.

Enough said.

Therefore, it is reasonable to assume that if the Left and the Arabs succeed in forming a government, it will not last very long.

If the Jewish Right succeeds, however, it is clear that we cannot rely on miracles in every election.

The challenge of overcoming the Left and the Arabs, who are supported by the entire world, is becoming increasingly difficult.

And who knows whether there will be another opportunity to correct the situation and eliminate the danger in the future?

A Few Tips for Those Who Want Another Chance to Survive Here

First and foremost, we must urgently find a way to neutralize the influence of the Muslim Brotherhood within our society.

If we are dragged into another election campaign in the near future:

1. Unite the smaller parties.

The small parties of Winter, Leitner, and Avi Maoz must unite in a technical electoral bloc or join an existing party.

Together, they would pass the electoral threshold and add another four to six seats to the Jewish Right.

2. Remove unsuitable candidates from the electoral lists.

Winter and Leitner must have the wisdom to remove from their lists those Arabs and Jews who have previously expressed support for a Palestinian state.

There are already enough Arabs and leftists in other parties.

If these individuals are truly loyal to Israel and to the party, let them support the party as activists rather than as members of the Knesset.

Good public diplomacy? Loyalty? By all means!

Let them explain Israel's position to their hearts' content and continue demonstrating loyalty without receiving a Knesset seat as a reward.

Reward them in other ways — compensate them for their loyalty and excellent public diplomacy!

As far as I am concerned, they can serve as national spokespersons, earning twice the salary and twice the pension of the prime minister and the Supreme Court justices combined.

3. Sign a vote-sharing agreement with Ben-Gvir.

4. Stop the infighting on the Right.

Bibi and Smotrich must stop shooting inside their own armored personnel carrier.

They must stop spending millions on campaigns against Winter, Maoz, and Leitner, particularly if those parties unite in a technical bloc.

5. Sign a joint national-right-wing covenant.

All national, religious, and Jewish right-wing parties should agree to sign a covenant entitled:

"One More Chance to Save Israel from the Muslim Brotherhood"

All Jewish, national, and religious right-wing parties must quickly enact every necessary law and appoint new judges who will not obstruct the plan to neutralize the influence of the Muslim Brotherhood.

Laws must urgently be enacted to revoke voting rights from anyone who refuses to swear allegiance to the State of Israel as the nation-state of the Jewish people.

Anyone who refuses to declare loyalty to the state, and anyone who is hostile to the state, should be shown the way out.

Out!

Encouraging voluntary emigration is not enough!

Those who remain must also be required to declare their loyalty to the state.

And anyone who acts against the state must be expelled immediately!

Time Is Running Out

The Holy One, Blessed Be He, in His great mercy, is giving us another chance — another opportunity to live.

The elections were yet another wake-up call.

There is no way of knowing whether we will have further opportunities to repair the breach that threatens the continued existence of the state.

Clearly, these measures could lead to sanctions and difficult times during the transitional period.

It is also clear that our Jewish brothers and sisters abroad will continue to suffer even more as conditions in the Diaspora, which is already disintegrating, deteriorate at an alarming pace.

We must therefore prepare ourselves.

A period of hardship is preferable to certain death!

It is better to live in a country hated by the wicked and by our enemies throughout the world than to die at the hands of those who are leading us like sheep to the slaughter!

To the Jews of the Diaspora: Leave and Come Home!

Get out of there and come home!

In any event, the situation is beginning to resemble the days preceding the Holocaust in the countries of the Diaspora.

Get out of there and come home!

The Israeli government must establish an emergency program capable of immediately absorbing millions of Jews.

Israel Must Learn to Become Sparta

Israel must indeed learn to become like Sparta.

We must prepare for isolation and sanctions and find ways, as quickly as possible, to further develop our entire arms industry.

We must manufacture all the weapons, engines, and other equipment necessary to achieve industrial and security independence.

We must also find ways to circumvent the anticipated banking sanctions.

Bibi is already talking about this.

The time has come for action, before it is too late.

They are indeed rushing to the ballot box to exploit Israeli democracy in order to destroy Israel and democracy itself!

The Jewish state must be strengthened and saved by neutralizing internal threats and curbing the power of the ruling clique in the "Supreme" Court, which prevents elected representatives from implementing the will of the voters.

The State of Israel must become a closed state, sealing its borders against all foreign influence and doing whatever is necessary to defend itself — without paying excessive attention to world public opinion, which ties our hands and prevents us from defending ourselves.

"If You Will It, It Is No Dream"

As the visionary of modern Zionism, Theodor Herzl, famously declared in 1902:

"If you will it, it is no dream."

In the original German:

"Wenn ihr wollt, ist es kein Märchen."

And I will conclude with some good advice from Hillel the Elder, in Pirkei Avot 1:14:

"And if not now, when?"

Time is running out!

But we must not despair.

If we act quickly and correctly, everything will be all right, with God's help.

We are approaching the days of redemption.

And redemption will come precisely when we understand that we have no one upon whom to rely except our Father in Heaven!
